

FULL ANALYSIS

I. SUBSTANTIVE ANALYSIS

A. HOUSE PRINCIPLES ANALYSIS:

Safeguard individual liberty—This bill will protect incapacitated persons from unscrupulous trustees by allowing the court to appoint a court monitor on an emergency basis and without notice, by restricting who may serve as a monitor, and by requiring periodic court reviews to determine whether the guardianship is still necessary to protect the person.

Empower families—This bill affects family relationships by allowing the court or other concerned parties to intervene when a ward of a trust is being taken advantage of by the ward's guardian.

Comments from the Future of Florida's Families Committee

Provide limited government – The bill has the potential to increase the number of cases in which a monitor is appointed and, therefore, increase the need for a greater number of individuals available to serve as monitors and increase the workload of the court.

Promote personal responsibility – The bill creates a new section of law that provides for the appointment of a court monitor on an emergency basis. The bill provides for the court to determine a reasonable fee for the services of the monitor which is to be paid from the property of the ward.

The bill also provides that if the court determines a motion for the appointment of a court monitor to have been filed in bad faith, then the costs of the proceeding, including attorney's fees, may be assessed against the individual making the motion.

B. EFFECT OF PROPOSED CHANGES:

Current law

Trusts

A trust is generally defined as:

a fiduciary relationship with respect to property, subjecting the person by whom the title to the property is held to equitable duties to deal with the property for the benefit of another person, which arises as a result of a manifestation of an intention to create it. . . . [A] "beneficiary of a trust" [is] one who has an equitable interest in property subject to a trust and who enjoys the benefit of the administration of the trust by a trustee. The trustee is the person who holds the legal title to the property held in trust, for the benefit of the beneficiary. The settlor, or trustor, is the person who creates the trust.¹

A "grantor" is "one who creates or adds to a trust and includes 'settlor' or 'trustor' and a testator who creates or adds to a trust."² "Trustee" refers to "an original, additional, surviving, or successor trustee, whether or not appointed or confirmed by court."³

Trust Contests

Section 737.2065, F.S., expressly prohibits the bringing of any action to contest the validity of any or all parts of a trust until the trust becomes irrevocable. This section was enacted in 1992, along with similar legislation forbidding the commencement of will contests before the death of the testator.⁴

Generally, revocable trusts are correctly treated as will substitutes, although they serve an additional function that is not contemplated by a will: a revocable trust can serve as the framework for the investment, management, expenditure, and distribution of the grantor's assets during his or her life.⁵ It is because of the similarity between a will and a revocable trust that the Legislature, in 1992, enacted statutes forbidding challenges to either instrument prior to the death of the testator for a will or prior to the trust becoming irrevocable, which typically occurs upon the death of the trust's settlor.⁶ However, because a trust can operate during the settlor's lifetime, and because the settlor may become incapacitated, there is also a potential guardianship aspect to a trust which, again, is not present in a will. An invalid revocable trust, which administers the grantor's assets during his or her lifetime, has the potential to cause great harm to the grantor.⁷ "Unlike probate, serving as a guardian is a responsibility that may change over time, last for many years, and include excruciatingly complex decisions about medical treatment, placement, and trade-offs between autonomy and beneficence."⁸

Guardianship

The Legislature has stated the general purpose of the guardianship chapter as follows:

[I]t is desirable to make available the least restrictive form of guardianship to assist persons who are only partially incapable of caring for their needs. Recognizing that every individual has unique needs and differing abilities, the Legislature declares that it is the purpose of this act to promote the public welfare by establishing a system that permits incapacitated persons to participate as fully as possible in all decisions affecting them; that assists such persons in meeting the essential requirements for their physical health and safety, in protecting their rights, in managing their financial resources, and in developing or regaining their abilities to the maximum extent possible; and that accomplishes these objectives through providing, in each case, the form of assistance that least interferes with the legal capacity of a person to act in her or his own behalf.⁹

As noted elsewhere, the Legislature's intent in section 744.344, F.S., indicates that a "guardian should be granted no more authority over the ward and his or her property than is necessary for the guardian to address the needs created by the specific incapacities of the ward, so that the substitute decision-making of the guardian leaves the ward with as much personal autonomy as is feasible." In re Guardianship of Fuqua, 646 So. 2d 795, 796 (Fla. 1st DCA 1994).

Some of the relevant definitions of terms used in guardianship include "ward," a person for whom a guardian has been appointed,¹⁰ "guardian," a person who has been appointed by the court to act on behalf of a ward's person, property, or both,¹¹ and "court monitor," a person appointed by the court pursuant to s. 744.107, F.S., to provide the court with information concerning a ward.¹²

Determining Incapacity

Section 744.331, F.S., sets forth the procedures for determining that a person is incapacitated. The notice of filing of a petition to determine incapacity and the petition for appointment of a guardian must be read to the alleged incapacitated person, the person must be provided with an attorney, who cannot serve as the guardian or counsel for the guardian, and within five days of filing a petition for determination of incapacity, the court must appoint an examining committee which must include a psychiatrist/physician, and a psychologist, a nurse, social worker, gerontologist, or other qualified persons with sufficient knowledge, skill, experience, or training.¹³ Each committee member must examine the person and then issue a joint report evaluating the person's mental health, functional ability, and physical health.¹⁴ If the committee determines that the person is not incapacitated in any respect, the court shall dismiss the petition.¹⁵ Pursuant to section 744.331(6), if the court finds by clear and convincing evidence that the person is incapacitated, the court shall enter a written order determining the person's incapacity, although such incapacity shall extend only to the rights specified in the order. Section 744.331(6)(b) states that the "court must find that alternatives to guardianship were considered and that no alternative to guardianship will sufficiently address the problems of the ward." Section 744.331(6)(f) states that "[w]hen an order is entered which determines a person is incapable of exercising delegable rights, a guardian must be appointed to exercise those rights."

Powers of Guardian Upon Court Approval

Section 744.441(11), F.S., provides that a plenary or limited guardian of the property may "[p]rosecute or defend claims or proceedings in any jurisdiction for the protection of the estate and of the guardian in performance of his or her duties."¹⁶ Other powers given under s. 744.441, F.S., and which a guardian may only exercise with court approval, include executing, exercising, or releasing any powers as trustee, personal representative, custodian for minors, conservator, or donee of any power of appointment or other power that the ward might have lawfully exercised if not incapacitated, if the execution, exercise, or release would be in the best interest of the ward.¹⁷ Additionally, a guardian may "[c]reate revocable or irrevocable trusts of property of the ward's estate which may extend beyond the disability or life of the ward in connection with estate, gift, income, or other tax planning or in connection with estate planning."¹⁸ Thus, it appears that a guardian may exercise powers over a revocable trust, which might include the power to revoke the trust.

Court-Appointed Guardianship Monitors

The "front end" of adult guardianship is the determination of incapacity and appointment of a guardian, and the "back end" is accountability of the guardian and court monitoring.¹⁹ Court monitoring of guardianship is vital to the protection of the ward, to provide the court with a way to verify the financial accounts the guardian provides to the court.²⁰ Verifying information in personal-status reports requires more personal involvement by the court, and is best accomplished by someone who can visit the ward to ascertain the suitability of the ward's living arrangements, the frequency of guardian visits, and the implementation of the care plan.²¹

Court Monitors

Section 744.107, F.S., allows the court to appoint a monitor “upon inquiry from any interested person” or on its own motion. The monitor has authority to “investigate, seek information, examine documents, or interview the ward,” and to present a report of such findings to the court.²² A family member or any other person with an interest in the proceedings may not serve as a monitor.²³ A monitor may be paid a reasonable fee from the property of the ward, but no state, county, or municipal employee shall be paid a fee for serving as a monitor.²⁴

This section gives the trial court broad authority to appoint a monitor in guardianship cases, but the statute has been criticized for its lack of guidelines regarding how the court-appointed monitor should perform his or her duties.²⁵ In 2003, the Florida Supreme Court’s Commission on Fairness, Committee on Court Monitoring, issued a report and recommendations finding that greater oversight of court monitors was warranted and recommending an overhaul and expansion of the court monitoring statute.²⁶

Trusts

This bill amends s. 737.2065 to create an exception to the prohibition on filing an action against a trust prior to that trust becoming irrevocable. Under this bill, a challenge to the trust could only be brought by a court-appointed guardian of the person of the incompetent ward/settlor of the trust, and the court would have to make a finding that the challenge to the trust was in the ward’s best interests during his or her probable lifetime. This bill would create a requirement that, if the court denied the guardian’s request, the court must review whether the ward was still in need of a guardian and whether the current delegation of rights was appropriate to serve the ward’s needs. Unless there is a court-appointed guardian of the property of an incapacitated settlor, there cannot be any contest challenging the trust before it becomes irrevocable because, presumably, a competent trust settlor can personally revoke or amend the trust as necessary during the settlor’s lifetime.²⁷

Guardianship

Section 744.331 requires that when a court finds by clear and convincing evidence that a person is incapacitated, the court must enter a written order determining such incapacity, but that the incapacity shall only extend to the rights specified in the order. When entering an order of incapacity, the court must consider and determine whether or not there is an alternative to guardianship that will sufficiently meet the needs of the incapacitated person. Unless the court finds that there is a suitable alternative that will sufficiently address the problems of the incapacitated person, a guardian shall be appointed. Additionally, this bill amends section 744.331 to state that when an interested person files a verified statement asserting a good faith belief that the alleged incapacitated person’s trust, trust amendment, or durable power of attorney is invalid, and a reasonable factual basis for the belief is given, the existence of such an instrument shall not be considered an alternative to the appointment of a guardian. However, the appointment of a guardian does not preclude the court from determining that specific authority established by a durable power of attorney may still be exercised by the attorney in fact.

This bill amends section 744.107 to provide for service of the order of appointment and the monitor's report upon the guardian, the ward, the respective attorneys and other persons, as determined by the court. The bill also authorizes, if necessary, further action by the court to protect the interests of the ward. If further action is warranted upon receipt of the monitor's report, the trial court shall conduct a noticed hearing and then take whatever action is necessary to protect the assets of the ward's estate, including suspending a guardian or taking steps to remove a guardian. The bill provides that the order of appointment of a court monitor and the court monitor's report are confidential,²⁸ as provided by s. 744.1076, F.S.²⁹

This bill amends section 744.411(11) to state that before a guardian may bring an action pursuant to s. 737.2065, contesting the validity of a trust, the court must first find that the action appears to be in the ward's best interest during the ward's probable lifetime. Furthermore, if the court denies the guardian's request to bring an action under s. 737.2065, the court shall review the ward's continued need for a guardian and the extent of that need, if any.

The bill creates a new section, s. 744.462, F.S., which provides a framework, after a guardian has been appointed, through which the court may properly respond to new developments or information which may affect the guardianship proceeding.³⁰ This section will authorize the court to review the extent of the ward's continued need for a guardian or whether a guardian is needed, in the event of any new developments such as a judicial determination of the existence of a valid durable power of attorney or a valid trust amendment.

Emergency Court Monitors

The bill also creates section 744.1075, F.S., entitled "emergency court monitor," and states that a court may, upon inquiry from any interested person or upon its own motion, appoint a court monitor on an emergency basis without notice. The limitation on this authority is explained in the proposed s. 744.1075(1):

The court must specifically find that there appears to be imminent danger that the physical or mental health or safety of the ward will be seriously impaired or that the ward's property is in danger of being wasted, misappropriated, or lost unless immediate action is taken.

The court order must specifically name the powers and duties of the monitor and the matters to be investigated. Fifteen days after entering the order of appointment, the monitor must file a verified report of findings and recommendations to the court, along with supporting documents or evidence. After reviewing the monitor's report, the court shall determine whether there is probable cause to take further action on behalf of the ward's person or property. If there is no probable cause, the court shall issue an order so stating and discharge the monitor.

However, if probable cause exists, the court shall issue a show cause order directing the guardian or other respondent to state the essential facts constituting the charge and directing the respondent to appear and show cause as to why the court should not take further action. The order shall name a time and place for a hearing and provide "a reasonable time to allow for the preparation of a defense after service of the order." The authority of an emergency monitor is limited to sixty days or until an order showing no cause is issued, whichever occurs first. However, the monitor's authority may be extended by thirty days if there is a showing that emergency conditions still exist. Prior to the hearing on the order to show cause, the court may take action to protect the ward's physical or mental health, safety, or assets, including issuing a temporary injunction, restraining order, or an order freezing assets. The court shall give a copy of such order to all parties. After the hearing on the show cause order, the court may impose sanctions on the guardian, his or her attorney, or any other respondent. The court may also take any other action authorized by law, including entering a judgment of contempt, ordering an accounting, freezing assets, referring the case for criminal charges, filing a complaint with the Department of Children and Families, or initiating proceedings to remove a guardian.

Finally, a monitor may be paid a reasonable fee, as determined by the court, which shall be paid from the ward's property. An employee of the state, county, or municipality may not be compensated for conducting an investigation and providing such a report. If the court finds that the motion for a court monitor was filed in bad faith, the costs of the proceeding, including attorney's fees, may be assessed against the movant.

C. SECTION DIRECTORY:

Section 1. Amends s. 737.2065, F.S., to state that the guardian of the property for an incapacitated grantor may initiate a trust contest prior to the trust becoming irrevocable.

Section 2. Amends s. 744.107, F.S., to establish certain restrictions upon whom the court may name as a monitor, listing certain individuals who have a right to receive the monitor's report, and granting the court power to conduct a hearing should the monitor's report warrant action on behalf of the ward.

Section 3. Creates s. 744.1075, F.S., entitled "emergency court monitor," establishing guidelines whereby a court may sua sponte appoint a court monitor on an emergency basis without notice.

Section 4. Amends s. 744.331(6)(b) and (f), F.S., regarding procedures to determine incapacity, setting forth procedures for the court to follow when entering an order of incapacity, and establishing requirements for an interested person who wishes to challenge the validity of an incapacitated person's trust, trust amendment, or durable power of attorney.

Section 5. Amends s. 744.441(11), F.S., to require a finding by the court that an action to be commenced by the guardian appears to be in the ward's best interests, and stating that if the court denies the guardian's request, the court shall review the ward's continued need for a guardian.

Section 6. Creates s. 744.462, F.S., stating that any judicial determination concerning the validity of an instrument concerning the ward's property shall be promptly recorded in the guardianship proceeding and stating that, under certain circumstances, the court shall review the ward's continued need for a guardian.

Section 7. Provides that this bill shall take effect upon becoming a law.

II. FISCAL ANALYSIS & ECONOMIC IMPACT STATEMENT

A. FISCAL IMPACT ON STATE GOVERNMENT:

1. Revenues:
None.

2. Expenditures:
None.

B. FISCAL IMPACT ON LOCAL GOVERNMENTS:

1. Revenues:
None.

2. Expenditures:

None.

C. DIRECT ECONOMIC IMPACT ON PRIVATE SECTOR:

No significant costs, although this bill gives the trial court greater authority to appoint a monitor, and the cost of a court monitor may be taken from the ward's assets.

D. FISCAL COMMENTS:

Comments from the Future of Florida's Families Committee

The bill has the potential to have a fiscal impact on state government. By expanding current provisions related to the appointment of court monitors and creating a new section of law related to the appointment of emergency court monitors, more court monitors could be appointed. While full-time employees of the state, county, and municipal governments are not allowed to receive compensation for serving as court monitors, more government employee time may be spent acting as court monitors because of the expanded authority granted to courts to oversee the relationship between guardians and wards. The Office of the State Courts Administrator (OSCA) stated that there would be a fiscal impact on the court as a result of an increase in judicial workloads on guardianship issues. OSCA did not provide an estimate of those costs to committee staff.

If the pool of individuals serving as court monitors increases as a result of the bill, and if those individuals need any education or training in order to serve effectively in that capacity, there would be associated costs. Since guardians, both professional and family members and non-professionals, are required to have training, it would appear to be reasonable that individuals serving as monitors to these guardians would need some training. While both current law and the bill are silent with regard to court monitor qualifications, any costs related to education or training would have to be absorbed by some entity or some individual.

The bill provides that court monitors may be allowed a reasonable fee as determined by the court which may be paid from the assets of the ward. While this may result in a financial consequence to the ward, that fiscal impact may be offset by a savings to the ward if his or her assets are being mismanaged by a guardian.

The bill has the potential to cause some confusion related to the mandatory reporting requirements contained in chapter 415, Florida Statutes. This could increase the number of vulnerable adults becoming victims of financial exploitation and not receiving adequate protection.

The Department of Elder Affairs, the Statewide Public Guardianship Office, and the Agency for Persons With Disabilities all reported that there would be no fiscal impact on the agency or office. The Department of Children and Family Services, which has responsibility for Adult Protective Services and the Abuse Hotline, declined to provide an analysis of the bill.

III. COMMENTS

A. CONSTITUTIONAL ISSUES:

1. Applicability of Municipality/County Mandates Provision:

This bill does not require counties or municipalities to take an action requiring the expenditure of funds, does not reduce the authority that counties or municipalities have to raise revenue in the aggregate, and does not reduce the percentage of state tax shared with counties or municipalities.

2. Other:

Comments from the Future of Florida's Families Committee

The bill provides that the court may, under certain circumstances, appoint a court monitor on an emergency basis without notice, which could raise due process concerns. Minimal procedural due process is that parties whose rights are to be affected are entitled to be heard and, in order that they may take advantage of that right, they must be notified. Issues associated with such due process were raised and discussed as the Supreme Court's Commission on Fairness, Committee on Guardianship Monitoring explored guardianship monitoring in Florida:

Attorneys and professional guardians who appeared before the committee repeatedly expressed concern about due process issues associated with confidential communications between the court and the guardianship monitor. The committee thoroughly explored and debated the matter. While the committee is sensitive to the fact that attorneys and guardians may perceive there is a potential ex parte communication issue, the committee believes that in reality there is no impropriety as long as proper court procedures are established, published, and followed. Because the guardianship monitor is an arm of the court and works at the direction of the judge, it is permissible for communication between the court and monitor to be confidential (see, for example, rule 2.051(c)(3)(b), Florida Rules of Judicial Administration). Nevertheless, the committee recommends that insofar as possible, the monitoring process should be transparent and open, and all communications between the monitor and the judge should be in writing, become part of the confidential portion of the court file, and copies provided to counsel and other interested persons as prescribed by Florida law.³¹

B. RULE-MAKING AUTHORITY:

This bill does not create rule-making authority in any administrative agency.

C. DRAFTING ISSUES OR OTHER COMMENTS:

Comments from the Future of Florida's Families Committee

Protection for vulnerable individuals – Florida law contains a multitude of provisions intended to provide a number of protections for those individuals who are unable to provide for their own care and safety. Among those provisions are those found in chapters 39, 415, and 744 of the Florida Statutes:

- Chapter 39, relating to dependent children, states that it is a purpose of the Legislature that the children of this state be protected from abuse, neglect and abandonment. To that end, the chapter provides that any person who knows, or has reasonable cause to suspect, that a child is abused, abandoned, or neglected by a parent, legal custodian, caregiver, or other person responsible for the child's welfare, shall report such knowledge or suspicion to the Department of Children and Family Services (the department).³² Such reports are required to be made immediately to the department's central abuse hotline on the single statewide toll-free telephone number.³³ Failure to report knowledge or suspicion of abuse, neglect, or abandonment, is a criminal offense.³⁴ If the report is of an instance of known or suspected child abuse by someone other than a parent, legal custodian, caregiver, or other person responsible for the child's welfare, the call shall be immediately electronically transferred to the appropriate county sheriff's office by the central abuse hotline.³⁵

For those children without a parent who is able and willing to keep the child safe, the chapter defines a number of alternative caregiving arrangements, both temporary and permanent, that may be ordered by the court, including legal guardianship pursuant to the provisions of chapter 744, Florida Statutes. The court is required to appoint a guardian ad litem for every child involved in a dependency proceeding and may appoint a guardian advocate for a drug dependent newborn.³⁶

- Chapter 415, relating to adult protective services, provides recognition by the Legislature that:

... there are many persons in this state who, because of age or disability, are in need of protective services. Such services should allow such an individual the same rights as other citizens and, at the same time, protect the individual from abuse, neglect, and exploitation. It is the intent of the Legislature to provide for the detection and correction of abuse, neglect, and exploitation³⁷ through social services and criminal investigations and to establish a program of protective services for all disabled adults or elderly persons in need of them. It is intended that the mandatory reporting of such cases will cause the protective services of the state to be brought to bear in an effort to prevent further abuse, neglect, and exploitation of disabled adults or elderly persons. In taking this action, the Legislature intends to place the fewest possible restrictions on personal liberty and the exercise of constitutional rights, consistent with due process and protection from abuse, neglect, and exploitation. Further, the Legislature intends to encourage the constructive involvement of families in the care and protection of disabled adults or elderly persons.³⁸

The chapter requires that any person who knows, or has reasonable cause to suspect, that a vulnerable adult has been or is being abused, neglected, or exploited shall immediately report such knowledge or suspicion to the central abuse hotline. Upon receiving a report, the hotline must determine if the report requires an immediate onsite protective investigation or an investigation that must be commenced within 24 hours.³⁹

If the Department of Children and Family Services has reason to believe that the abuse, neglect, or exploitation is perpetrated by a second party, it is required to notify the appropriate law enforcement agency and state attorney and the criminal investigation and protective investigation shall proceed concurrently. The department is also required to notify the appropriate Florida local advocacy council, or long-term care ombudsman council, when appropriate, that an alleged abuse, neglect, or exploitation perpetrated by a second party has occurred.⁴⁰ In addition, depending upon the circumstances, the department must notify specified administrative entities.⁴¹ When a report involving a guardian of the person or property or both, is received, the department is required to provide written notification to the probate court having jurisdiction over the guardianship.⁴²

In the course of an investigation, the department has the authority to provide, as determined necessary, protective services with the consent of the vulnerable adult, or, upon court order, without such consent. Protective services, including removal from the premises and medical treatment, may also be provided on an emergency basis without the consent of the vulnerable adult or a court order.

- Chapter 744, relating to guardianship, has a stated purpose of promoting the public welfare by establishing a system that permits incapacitated persons to participate as fully as possible in all decisions affecting them; that assists such persons in meeting the essential requirements for their physical health and safety, in protecting their rights, in managing their financial resources, and in developing or regaining their abilities to the maximum extent possible; and that accomplishes these objectives through providing, in each case, the form of assistance that least interferes with the legal capacity of a person to act in her or his own behalf.⁴³ The chapter addresses, among other things, the qualifications, educational requirements, duties and powers, and termination of a guardian, the process for adjudication of incapacity, provisions related to veterans' guardianship, and public guardianship. The chapter also provides for the appointment of a court monitor. While the statute provides that the monitor may investigate, seek information, examine documents, or interview the ward, it does not clearly provide that the purpose of the monitor is to review the activities of a guardian, assess the well-being of the ward, and ensure that the ward's assets are being protected. Current law also does not specify any action that shall or may be taken by the court based on findings by the monitor.⁴⁴

The provisions of the bill specifically relating to the appointment of a court monitor on an emergency basis tend to add confusion to the relationship between the mandatory reporting requirements and process contained in chapters 39 and 415, Florida Statutes, and the provisions being added to chapter 744, Florida Statutes. For example, while chapter 39, Florida Statutes, requires the Department of Children and Family Services to provide written notification to the probate court having jurisdiction over the guardianship when a report is accepted involving a guardian of the person or property or both, there appears to be no corresponding requirement in currently in chapter 744, Florida Statutes, or in the bill, for the probate court to coordinate the work of the appointed court monitors with the work of the department.

The standards for reporting abuse, neglect, or exploitation appear to be considerably different between chapters 415 and 744, Florida Statutes. Chapter 415 requires any person who knows, or has reasonable cause to suspect, that a vulnerable adult has been or is being abused, neglected, or exploited to immediately report, whereas the bill provides that the court may make a report to the department after the hearing on an order to show cause in a proceeding initiated because the court finds the ward is in imminent danger.

It would appear that much confusion related to the responsibility for reporting abuse, neglect, or exploitation could be eliminated by adding proper cross referencing between the chapters and adding some clarification to the requirements contained in chapters 415 and 744, Florida Statutes.

Guardianship Monitoring –

A guardian is defined as a surrogate decision-maker appointed by the court to make personal and/or financial decisions on behalf of an adult with mental or physical disabilities who has been adjudicated incapacitated or for a minor in circumstances where the parents die or become incapacitated or if a child receives an inheritance, proceeds of a lawsuit, or insurance policy exceeding the amount allowed by state statute. When the court removes an adult's rights to order his or her own affairs, there is an accompanying duty to protect the individual, which may be done through the appointment of a guardian. While guardianship proceedings begin with an adversarial hearing, once incapacity has been determined, there are usually no "adversaries" to bring concerns to the court's attention. Thus, the court must be proactive to discover and respond to disputes. Guardianship monitoring is a mechanism Florida courts can use to review a guardian's activities, assess the well-being of the ward, and ensure that the ward's assets are being protected.⁴⁵

In 1999, former Chief Justice Major B. Harding directed the Supreme Court Commission on Fairness to investigate and report on various models for guardianship monitoring. The Commission established the Guardianship Monitoring Committee with a membership that included probate judges, chief judges, court staff, representatives of the Statewide Public Guardianship Office, attorneys with experience in guardianship matters, academics, and professionals in the field of social work, all with considerable direct experience. The Committee reviewed available literature on the subject, visited Florida courts that are experimenting with innovative guardianship monitoring methods, and conducted public hearings around the state to receive input from guardians, clerks of court, attorneys, advocates, and other interested persons. The Committee found that while most guardians and attorneys do an admirable job, more active oversight is necessary in guardianship cases.⁴⁶

As a result of its work, the Committee adopted a number of findings, including the following:

- An ideal guardianship monitoring program encompasses four major service areas: (1) initial and on going screening and reviewing of guardians; (2) reporting on the well-being of the ward; (3) reporting on the protection of the ward's assets; and (4) case administration.
- Minimum requirements for guardianship monitoring should be established and the monitoring process should be well defined.
- Insofar as possible, the monitoring process should be transparent and open, and communication between the monitor and the judge should be in writing and become part of the official court record.
- It is sound public policy for guardianship monitoring to be available in every judicial circuit.
- Monitoring will require additional resources in order to adequately oversee guardianship cases. The cost of monitoring can be mitigated through the effective use of technology.
- Existing guardianship monitoring programs that utilize well-trained and experienced professional staff are working well.
- Monitoring programs that rely entirely upon volunteers are not always efficient and effective. Although well intentioned, volunteers often lack knowledge and experience with the complex medical, legal, and financial issues involved in adult guardianship cases.
- There is a need to recruit highly qualified, motivated, and trained professionals into the guardianship field – both as guardians and attorneys.

The bill expands the provisions for the appointment of court monitors without incorporating provisions reflective of the findings of the Committee; findings which would appear to improve the monitoring process.

In addition:

- The bill provides that the fee for a monitor, as determined by the court, may be paid from the assets of the ward. In the case of an indigent ward with no funds to pay monitor costs, it is unclear whether that makes the ward ineligible for the services of a monitor or, if not, how the monitor will be paid.

IV. AMENDMENTS/COMMITTEE SUBSTITUTE & COMBINED BILL CHANGES

On March 9, 2005, the Future of Florida's Families Committee adopted an amendment to remove all the language relating to Public Records.

The bill was then reported favorably with a committee substitute.
